X.d.742: Autograph receipt for a medical broth for purifying the blood,

The Troians as I heard, built Rome , & did possess it, who were put to flight, Æneas being there General. They were wandering up & down, & know not where to abide; with these the Aborigins , who are a wild ^{kin} of men, free & secure from all Laws, & Government. These Troians , & Aborigins after they did mett togeder in on wall, being of unequal equal deshent, of different languashe, on living contrary to another, it would not bee belived altho it were spoken how they grow up. But after there riches did increase by the citizens, by there manrs, & possessing the land, they became prosperese, and powerfull enowgh as the most part of men did heare the nightboure people did envey them for there riches. There= fore the Kings, & nightbour people did tray them by warr: few of there friends did help them, for the rest being at these Kings, & people rane aside. Butt the Romans were diligent, both in time of pace & warr, they were making hast, were preparing all necessary things, the on was adwicing the other to stope the enemie; they did defend there liberty, contrie, parens, by warr, after they sattled that danger by strenth, they helped there friend & commerads; they purchased friends rather by giving them good deeds, then taking them away from them, the first name of Government was called King= =ly: they that were chosen to be magistrats were old, but were witty, did doe good to the State of the comman wealth: these old men were called fathers as either for there age, or lick care.
