Bacon: 'Fulke Greville had much and private access to Queen Elizabeth, which he used honourably, and did many men good; yet he would say merrily of himself: That he was like Robin Goodfellow. For when the maids spilt the milk-pans, or kept any racket, they would lay it upon Robin. So what tales the ladies about the Queen told her, or other bad offices that they did, they would put it upon him'. [Francis Bacon, Apophthegms New and Old (1625)].
Robert Naunton described him as one of the Queen's favourites: 'He had the longest lease and the smoothest time without rubs of any of her favourites.
He came to the court in his youth and prime...backed with a plentiful fortune, which (as himself was wont to say) was the better held together by a single life, wherein he lived and died a constant courtier and of the ladies'.

Cofferer and Controller: selected payments.

Cofferer of the Household and Controller of the Household made duplicate accounts of daily expenditure for the court, under eleven headings each day.

The accounts are in Latin; the headings in English translation are: Pantry; Buttery; Wardrobe; Kitchen; Poultry; Scullery; Saucery; Halls and rooms; Stables; Fees; Alms (4 shillings per day throughout the reign).

Each week has a separate page, and the total spent each day is given, with the total for each week. An average daily total was about £100, more on Sunday, for St George's Eve and Day in April, at St George's Feast (final Feast of the reign was in 1566), at Easter, and when the Queen was on progress. On Christmas Day the expenditure was doubled, or even trebled.

The accounts (each year beginning on October 1st), give the place where the court was each day, so are an invaluable source for its location when the Queen was on progress. Unfortunately accounts have survived for only about half the reign. In one year in particular, 1589, some separate monthly accounts exist; these show that the main account, based on these, occasionally inadvertently misses out a short visit by the Queen.

Some accounts include additional expenditure, eg. for visitors at court. These have been included in the Text, and are listed below.

Royal Household Orders.

1576 July (I): 'Remembrance of charges that be not comprised in her Majesty's Book of Ordinance (and cause the greater expenses)'. With annotation by Lord Burghley. Extracts. [BL Lansdowne 21/65].

'Her Majesty's privy diet served every fish day throughout the year'...

'The lodging of the white staves and others that be appointed ordinary tables without the court in the time of progress doth cause double expenses of beer, ale, and wine and other allowances'.

'The great number of noble personages lodged and being about the court, with their great trains of servants much surmounting the ancient order of her house, doth likewise cause great expenses of ale, beer, wine, wood, coals, rushes etc'.

'Eating and drinking in noblemen and women's chambers on the fish days, whereby her Majesty's Chamber is not only unfurnished at meal times, and the same allowance unnecessarily spent, but the meat appointed carried away by the Grooms of the Chamber, and eaten in places where there is a great number of their servants and others fed, which causeth great and unorderly expenses. Late suppers and late serving of All Night doth also cause great expenses'. [Burghley: 'For that the offices are open thereby'].

'Alteration of Removing, and days not kept as they be appointed, doth not only cause great waste of provisions laid in divers places, but also in expenses of Purveyors and others in removing the same again'.

'If it might please her Majesty to have her great service carried into her Privy Chamber, as it was in her Father's days, it would greatly diminish the charges and expenses'.

'If all sweet wines to be spent for her Highness might be laid in Privy Cellars as heretofore they have been (except great feasts only) and to be kept by the Grooms of the Privy Chamber, by her Majesty's appointment, would much abate the expenses of the same'.

'For that her Majesty's diet is dressed in two several kitchens doth double the expenses of wood and coals. Meat dressed in divers places within the court out of her Majesty's own kitchens, for divers and sundry persons, doth not only cause the greater expenses, but also pestereth the court with unfit persons and hangers on by reason of the same'.

'The great numbers of hangers on the court and followers, as Artificers, Suitors, and Launderers, doth likewise cause greater expenses'.

'If noblemen and noblewomen being lodged within the court would be contented with such allowance as is appointed unto them for their Bouge of Court, and to keep no further number of persons than of old time they were allowed, would likewise abate the great expenses'.

bouge of court: allowance of bread, ale, wine, fuel, candles.

white staves: high-ranking officials, who carried a white staff, the symbol of their authority.

1576 July (II): 'Reformations to be had and put in use for the diminution of the great expenses of her Majesty's house'. Draft corrected by Lord Burghley; his corrections shown in italics. [BL Lansdowne 21/67].

'First that a book may be made of the whole number of servants that shall be needful for her Majesty's service in every office within her house, and that none be increased but by her Majesty's own warrant'.

'That her Majesty's Book of Diet (or a new book to be made for every man's ordinary diet) may be duly observed, and not increased by any commandments or otherwise (without special cause) at any time'.

'That it may please her Highness to assign a book unto the Lord Chamberlain, appointing who and how many she will have lodged within her house'.

'A like book to be made for the ordinary Bouge of Court, and none other increased, but by her Majesty's warrant. And likewise for their carriages of stuff'.

'That it would please her Highness to reform her own diet'.

This clause was altered by Lord Burghley to:

'That her Highness's pleasure may be known, whether she will have the allowances continue for her own diet as it hath been of late years, or a new rate according to the King her father's, or larger in respect of time'.

'That no man keep more servants nor boys about the court than shall be appointed him...'

'To remove all the excessive number of Launderers, Artificers, and others, hanging and haunting in and about the court'.

'That no man be served with flesh upon any fish day at the Queen's charge (but her Majesty only)'.

'That all vigil and fasting days may be duly observed and kept'.

[In such sort as her Majesty's charges increase not by the contrary, but for her Majesty's own mouth].

'That due hours may be observed in serving for All Night, and other livery times. And that All Night being once served the officers to depart and no person to be served after but her Majesty only'. [For which purpose one in every office to attend for her Majesty's mouth only].

'That no person have any meat dressed in any other kitchen within her Majesty's house than in the kitchens appointed for the same'.

[But such special persons as her Majesty shall license to that use].

'Ladies' and gentlewomen's women may be commanded to keep their places at meal times in the Queen's Majesty's Chamber and not in their ladies' and mistresses' chambers, without notorious cause of sickness or other necessary cause to be notified to the Lord Chamberlain by the Ushers'.

'That selling of meat out of the kitchens may be barred utterly not to be eaten within the court, which causeth a great number to eat and drink in their chambers which have no allowance'.

'The making of dishes from her Majesty's board may be rated and limited, for thereby groweth great occasions of keeping their chambers'.

'That such as keep tables, but specially the great tables, may be in the progress time lodged either within the court, or as near as may be together, so that their allowance may be had every meal out of the house, or else brought to one certain place, for many houses make double and treble expenses for the time'.

'That the days appointed for removes in time of her progress may be as little changed as need shall be and the alterations of places avoided as near as may be conveniently, for by the contrary great losses do follow'.

'That the remain of wax nightly served into her Majesty's Privy and Great Chamber may be returned into the office again'.

'That order may be taken for the redress of filling so great a number of bottles (to divers personages) in her Majesty's Buttery and Cellar, and that a rate and limitation may be thereof'.

'That some strait and severe order may be taken for such as shall carry any of her Majesty's vessel out at the court gates, with meat or otherwise, whereby most of the said vessel is embezzled and never returned'.

'That it would please her Majesty to appoint some one man of her Highness's Privy Chamber to take order for all such commandments as shall be commanded for her Majesty out of all offices within her house (and no other man's commandment to be observed), and a Brewing book kept'.

'That all those persons that are appointed to wait upon her Majesty in her Privy Chamber may dine and sup together...and not in sundry chambers'.

Clauses, with Burghley's notes, which are all deleted in the fair copy:

'That it would please her Majesty to reform her late coming into her lodging in the time of her progress (and at other times when her Highness is abroad hawking and hunting)'.

[Which causeth great expenses in wax, white lights, etc].

'That it will please her Highness to remove in the winter-time from one house to another as her provision is spent, and so shall she be well served, and the country well eased'.

[For the longer abode causeth great expenses in wages, carriages, etc].

'That all her Majesty's Purveyors and servants in every office within her house (and specially they that shall be in place of Charge) may be honest, discreet, and skilful persons'.

[Or else her Highness may be much abused in her service].

'That order be taken that no manner of person within her Majesty's house do break nor misuse any order that is or shall be appointed for the better service of her Majesty, upon pain of such punishment as is or shall be appointed'. [Or else all our labours shall be in vain].

1577, April: 'Articles set forth to be put in execution for the diminishing of the expenses of her Majesty's Household, so that the same may be within the compass of £40,000 by the year, according to her Majesty's pleasure'.
Extracts. [BL Harleian MS 589, f.185v-186].

'First that all breakfasts be abridged, and no eating before dinner, her Majesty's breakfasts and the Watch only excepted'.

'One dish to be abridged in every mess of meat exceeding the number of dishes by her Majesty's Book of Ordinance'.

'That all pensions granted to old servants in consideration of service to be without the house'.

'That no kitchens be kept in her Majesty's house, except her Majesty's ordinary kitchens. That no eating or drinking be suffered to be used in any man's chamber, of what degree soever he be, but where her Majesty appointeth tables to be kept. That it would please her Majesty to appoint that no person have bouge of court other than such as be ordinary, and the certain number of them to be appointed'.

'That no man keep greater number of servants than heretofore hath been accustomed by the ancient orders of the house'...

'That all bottles be abridged saving the Queen's Majesty's only'.

'That no wax or supper lights be served but only to the Queen's Majesty, and the ends of all the lights to be returned to the Chandlery'...

'That it may please her Majesty not to account the surcharges of progress within the compass of £40,000, but to be allowed otherwise'.

1583 Dec 7: 'Remembrances to my Lord Treasurer [Burghley] concerning Household causes', by Sir James Croft, Controller of the Household. [BL Lansdowne 34/35].

'Sundry disorders entered into the court, whereby excessive charges are grown in Household causes. The court is divided into two governments, that is to say, the Chamber and the Household'.

'In both these places every of the officers and ministers do keep more servants than they ought to do. All noblemen, and others, do bring into the court more servants than by ancient orders are limited. There be more persons lodged within the court than heretofore have been accustomed. There be divers marriages made within the court, and the married persons do still remain, which causeth increase of expenses. There be also a great number of Pages increased, as well under noblemen as others of meaner calling, who have their Pages attendant at every ordinary table, which is a new custom crept in, and so an increase of expenses. The Guard having their wages lately increased do now keep every of them a man or a boy, who most commonly hang upon the Buttery bar, wasting the fragments which should be given to the poor'.

'In the Household, inferior servitors and ministers are driven for necessity to make spoil of as much as they can embezzle: having only the bare wages of ancient time allowed, wherewith no man in these days is able to live. The Guard and Stable having their wages increased'.

'The inferior persons having allowance of meat, especially those in the Kitchen, do sell their meat to feed the servants of such as above the ordinary are lodged in court. For which purpose every office that can help with bread, drink, fuel and lights are corrupted'.

'Besides their poverty, which compelleth them to use their spoils, many in every office are grown old and past service, and therefore the others, not being able to supply the service, do ease themselves by their inferiors and servants, which cannot be thoroughly remedied except her Majesty will grant them pensions, as in former times Princes have been accustomed to do. Otherwise that it would please her Highness to license them to sell their places to such as for personage and otherwise shall be thought meet for service'.

'Of these unable persons, both old, sickly, and impotent, the greater number are in the Kitchen, and therefore it is not possible that the meat through the house should be well dressed. Many of these by inspection be such as are not meet to come to the handling of any honest man's meat'.

'Albeit that many of these disorders may be redressed, yet till men may have such wages and allowances as in reasonable sort they may live, the common spoil will never be left. In these days, if the Clerk Controllers did not give extraordinary allowance to such as do travel in service, the house could not be served, which is an increase of expenses not to be avoided. Thus much for disorders'.

'Besides it is manifest that the prices of victuals and incidents are increased above ten or twelve thousand pounds by the year. These causes being not known to her Majesty ministereth occasion of offence, not possible to be helped by the head officers'.

'Wherefore till some redress be made of such abuses as by good order may be reformed, and men by wages or reward made able to live, and a new book by good counsel set down, having respect to the time both for prices of victuals and incidents, the Queen's Majesty shall never be satisfied, neither shall the officers serve without continual displeasure, use they never so great diligence. Some things might be added which are omitted, which peradventure shall be more largely opened, when other men shall set down their opinions'.

1598: Orders for the Royal Household.

In November 1598 detailed Orders were set down in the Lord Steward's Book to be observed by the following departments:

Acatery; Almoners (see below); Boiling-house; Cellar and Pitcher-house; Ewery; Kitchen; Larder; Pastry; Porters (see below); Poultry; Scullery; Spicery; Woodyard. For Cart-takers see the Text: 1598 Nov 20.

Almoners, 1598.

'Orders to be performed by the Almoners and Chamber-keepers for the better relief of the poor'.

'First that the Almoners with all convenient speed do deliver into every chamber and office within her Majesty's house, where any allowance of Diet is made, a convenient basket to put in the reversion of all bread and meat which shall be daily there remaining at dinner and suppers, which is by them safely to be kept for the relief of the poor'.

'That every morning by 6 o'clock the said Almoners do bring into the Hall sufficient baskets fit for the receiving of all such bread and meat as shall be brought unto them by the said Chamber-keepers, which they shall set down at the Screen, where they are to stay and abide by the space of an hour'.

'During which time all the said Chamber-keepers shall bring and deliver unto them their baskets with all such bread and meat as the day before they had remaining, upon pain that everyone offending therein shall suffer imprisonment or punishment at the discretion of the Board [of Green Cloth]'.

'That there be daily attending there a Clerk, belonging either to the Cofferer, the Clerk of the Green Cloth, the Clerk Controller, or the Clerk of the Kitchen, who is to have a book containing all the places from whence the Alms should be brought, in the which he shall cross all those who do bring the same, and to note all such which do either make default or else bring but small relief'.

'That the Almoners, after the time of abode in the Hall is expired, are presently to carry out their said Alms, and there indifferently to deliver and distribute the same unto the poor in due and orderly sort, to her Majesty's honour, wherein if it shall be found that any of the said Almoners shall either take away to their own use, or shall give or sell any part of the said Alms to any person or persons, other than as aforesaid, that then the offender therein shall lose his place and service'.

Porters, 1598.

'Orders to be observed by her Majesty's Porters at the Gate who are then to give their dutiful attendance'.

'First not to suffer any boys, masterless men, rascals, or base persons, to come within the Court. And if any person shall press to come into the same, without good reason yielded therefor, that then they do bring the said persons to be examined before some officer of the Counting House'.

'Not to suffer any woman of mean degree (not known to attend in Court) to come within the Court Gates without the privity [knowledge] of some of the officers of the Counting House'.

'Not to suffer any Laundress allowed, or their servants, to enter the Court but upon the Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays, and upon every of those days not to come before 8 o'clock in the morning, and to tarry any longer in the Court than 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and in the afternoon of those days not to come within the Court before 2 o'clock and not to stay above 4 o'clock. And that those that are found to break this order to be presently presented to the Counting House that order may be taken to avoid them out of the Court'.

'They shall not suffer any wood, coals, leather jacks [containers], pots, silver or pewter vessel, meat or drink, to pass out at the Court Gate but to those that are allowed, and that they repair into the Counting House at every her Majesty's houses to receive a perfect note of all persons lodged out of the Court which are allowed Diet or Bouge of Court'.

'That every day one of the said Porters do go into the back yards and other suspicious places and corners in and about the Court, especially about the Kitchens and the Buttery bar, carefully to espy and search for masterless men, rogues and vagabonds, and finding any then to bring them into her Majesty's Counting House to be examined'.

'That they suffer not any dogs to come within the Court Gate but such small spaniels as they know daily do belong to some Councillor or Nobleman or woman'.

'That they shut in the gates and open the same in due and convenient time every evening and morning, using very careful and diligent attendance, because at those times the greatest disorders are committed'.

'That none of their servants shall attend at any of the gates within their charge or shall open any of them unless one of the principal sworn officers shall be present'.

'That they do not suffer any woman or other person, except the Laundresses within their time limited, to enter in at the Court Gates to the intent to bring out any dishes, candlesticks, trenchers or stools, but that the same be otherwise brought out of the gates by the Chamber-keepers or other their servants which are appointed to attend upon them'.

'That they do not keep nor suffer to be kept any more servants within their office than are allowed and set down in Mr Shelley's book, the Clerk of the Cheque for the Household, upon pain for everyone offending therein for the first offence to have one month's imprisonment, and to lose one quarter's wages, and for the second offence to lose his place and service'.

1599: Orders for supplying French wines to the Royal Household.

1599 Sept 1: 'Articles agreed upon with John Swinnerton the younger of London, merchant, for the yearly service of the full number of 200 tuns of wine of the growth of the dominions of the French King for the expenses of her Majesty's house, which composition to continue for the full number of four years beginning at Michaelmas next' [Sept 29]...

'First. Upon notice given to John Swinnerton from the Officers of her Majesty's Green cloth there shall be sent and delivered from the store-house of the said Swinnerton in London and upon his choice 200 tuns of Gascon wines... to be conveyed and sent to such of her Majesty's houses as they shall give their order, upon her Majesty's charge of portage and carriage of the same'.

'The same wines so to be delivered shall be well conditioned in the filling, hooping, barring, spooning, racking and coining without charge to her Majesty for the same and the Queen's porters shall see that the said wines shall be filled full when they shall be received from him'...

'When her Majesty shall repair to any house so furnished as abovesaid, if any of the said wines so laid in there by the said John Swinnerton shall upon the taste of one of her Majesty's Purveyors, joined with the liking of one of the Yeomen of her Majesty's Mouth, not be found serviceable for the Queen and the household, then the said John Swinnerton shall take away and remove from thence the said wines so disliked without charge to her Majesty'...

'He shall use her Majesty's wine porters for the loading and carriage of the said wines'...

'It is further agreed, her Highness going in progress from any of her standing houses here named, viz. Havering, Greenwich, Westminster, St James, Richmond, Hampton Court, Nonsuch, Oatlands and Windsor, the said John Swinnerton to be no further charged, but that her Majesty shall stand to all manner of charges whatsoever for the carriage of the wines from all the said houses and places as her Majesty shall go from thence, as in case the said wines were delivered from his houses of store'...

1600: Thomas Wilson: 'The Queen's Expenses'.

From 'The State of England Anno Dom 1600 by Thomas Wilson', ed. F.J.Fisher, Camden Society Miscellany xvi (1936).

Thomas Wilson (c.1565-1629), lawyer, was a nephew of Dr Thomas Wilson, the Queen's former Secretary, who died in 1581.

'The greatest ordinary expense is the entertainment of her house and court, which for hospitality is much exceeding all other Princes in Christendom, she maintaining daily at her own only charge 46 tables furnished with plenty and abundance of meat, beer and wine'.

'First her own table in the Presence Chamber served with three courses, at each course 40 or more several dishes, where notwithstanding she seldom or never eateth, but the Carver distributeth it to the ladies and courtiers and keepeth for her own table what she pleaseth, for with the Carver being some of the beautifullest maids in the court (every day a change) dineth commonly the young counts [earls], lords and other gallants whom she pleaseth to invite and some ladies for fashion's sake, and there is commonly the best cheer'.

- (2) 'The Queen's table in the Privy Chamber.
- (3) A table furnished for all the great ladies and others if there be room.
- (4) The Lord Chamberlain's table in the Great Chamber for such courtiers as pleaseth him to invite, and certain officers, ushers etc.
- (5) A table furnished for all the Queen's maids.
- (6) A table for all waiting gentlewomen of great ladies. These two are also in the Great Chamber.
- (7) A table for the Privy Council and other lords, in the Council Chamber.
- (8) A table for the Treasurer of the Household and for such gentlemen as he will bid.
- (9) A table for the Controller of the Household.
- (10) The Cofferer's table who keepeth the money daily spent.
- (11) The Clerks of the Green Cloth's table who are of the council of the house.
- (12,13,14) Tables for 3 Clerks of the Kitchen.
- (15) The Master of the Horse Count [Earl] Essex a table.
- (16,17) The two Secretaries of State each a table.
- (18) The Clerks of the Council and Clerks of Signet and Privy Seal.
- (19) The Chaplains' table.
- (20) The Dean of the Chapel a table.
- (21) The Master of the Jewel-house a table.
- (22) A table for the gentlemen servers, waiters, and ushers'.

'All these tables are plentifully furnished, and all gentlemen and chief officers, unto all which tables any gentleman stranger, traveller, or other of gentlemen like behaviour may go ordinarily unbidden and be welcome'.

'There are 25 other tables also for inferior officers in every office, as the Cellar, Buttery, Pantry, Kitchens, two Spicery, Ewery, Bake-house, Larder, Pitcher-house, Chandlery, Wafery, Confectionery, Laundry, Boiling-house, Acaterly, Poultry, Scalding-house, Pastry, Scullery, Woodyard, Almonry, Porters, Musicians, and the Wardrobe at Robes, which are the principal, to all these any other stranger may go unbidden, and gentlemen if they please to sit among yeomen'.

'These 47 tables with their appurtenances, together with the expenses for the stables...for the Queen's horses of pleasure, have of long time been allowed every year in £120,000 sterling, which is the third part of the whole revenue'.

'The extraordinary expense consisteth in buying her apparel, jewels, and all other furniture necessary to such a Prince, buying of horses and armour, building and repairing of ships and their furnitures, alms and private gifts, presents and pensions and in expenses of War'.

'For her Furniture, Jewels, Apparel, Coaches, Barges, and such like, they are all very Royal, and one year with another she spendeth herein no less than £20,000'.

'Building and repairing of houses, castles, ships, and their furniture in time of peace costs her about £50,000 yearly'.

'Her alms is not less ordinary than £2000, besides all such goods of such as murder themselves, which is given for alms'...

'She hath been ever liberal till now of late in giving and lending; they say she giveth £3000 yearly to the King of Scots...She has lent to the Low Countries since the wars began £300,000...The King of France oweth her little less'...

'Mr Sackford, that carried the Privy Purse, hath in his own account ordinarily every year accounted £4000 which she giveth away in pretty things to strangers and such like as come to the court for relief and rewards'.

'Her pleasures cost her much, as shows, triumphs, and such like, great marriages with any of her Maids or Ladies publicly in the court, and comedies, shows, devices, and entertainment of Ambassadors publicly, as I have seen divers, viz. the Duke of Bouillon [in 1596] who cost her every day £100, besides the charge of his solemn entertainment at her own table, likewise the Danish Ambassador [in 1597 and 1598] and others of these. She spends ordinarily £5000 yearly, and some time so much in a month, as occasion serve'.

The greatest expense: 'Of war in defending the realm and offending the enemies of the same'. In recent years: in 1588 against the Spanish Armada; in 1589 in Portugal; in 1596 at Cadiz; in 1597 the Islands Voyage; 'but the greatest charge of all is this last war in Ireland...This charge, if it should continue, would soon make her a poor Prince and a miserable country'.

If not in wars offensive or defensive some is lent to the aid of the Queen's allies; 'so that if she spares it one year or two she spends it all the 3rd and the devil may dance in her coffers, where he finds but a few crosses'.

2. Chronological List.
3. Godchildren cross-referenced by husband and wife.
4. Foreign godchildren.
5. Births and christenings: miscellaneous references.

1. Godchildren: Pre-Accession: all that have been traced.

1544 September: 1st godchild: Henry Cotton.

Parents: Richard Cotton; one of Prince Edward's Councillors; knighted 1547; wife: Jane (Onley). 'Lady Elizabeth' sent a Gentleman Usher from Woking, Surrey, to Penn, Bucks, 'to the christening of Mr Cotton's child'.

Henry Cotton became Bishop of Salisbury, 1598; died 1615.

[Queen Catherine Parr's accounts: Letters and Papers of Henry VIII].

1550 December: Henry Cavendish (1550-1616).

Parents: Sir William Cavendish; wife: Elizabeth; Sir William was the second of her four husbands; she was later Countess of Shrewsbury ('Bess of Hardwick'). Sir William noted in his pocket-book that Henry's godparents were: Princess Elizabeth; Henry Grey Marquis of Dorset; John Dudley Earl of Warwick.

[Derbyshire Arch Soc Journal, xxix, 91-95].

1551 Dec 14: Mrs Pendred's child.

Cofferer's Account of the Lady Elizabeth, Oct 1551-Sept 1552: 'Paid the 14th of December at the christening of Mrs Pendred's child...50s'. ['Household Expenses of the Princess Elizabeth...at Hatfield', Camden Miscellany (1853)].

Blanche Parry wrote in 1582 to Lord Burghley on behalf of 'Mr Pendryth', whose wife nursed the Queen, and who is one of the Queen's tenants of the manor of Northbourne in Kent. [HT.ii.517].

1551 Dec 27: John Carey (1551-1617), became in 1603 3rd Lord Hunsdon.

Cofferer's Account: Paid Dec 27 'at the christening of Mr Carey's child, 40s'.

Parents: Henry Carey, later 1st Lord Hunsdon; wife: Anne (Morgan). Their son Robert Carey noted: 'John was born at Durham Place upon Christmas Day after the sweat...The Duke of Northumberland and the Earl of Pembroke godfathers and my Lady Elizabeth's grace godmother'. [sweat: sweating sickness].

[Robert Carey, Memoirs, ed. Mares (1972), 90].

1551 December: Mr Norris's child.

Cofferer's Account: December: 'Given to the poor at the christening of Mr Norris's child, 4s'. Apparently a child which died in infancy of Henry Norris, knighted in 1566, later 1st Lord Norris; wife: Margery (Williams).

1552 summer: Sir John Cheke's child.

Cofferer's Account: 'William Russell, for his expenses in riding to the christening of Mr Cheke's child...12s'. Parents: Sir John Cheke (1514-1557), knighted 1551, a Tutor to Edward VI; wife: Mary (Hill) (c.1532-1616).

Lady Cheke married (2) Henry Macwilliam.

1556 Sept: Elizabeth Verney.

Parents: Hugh Verney (died 9 Sept 1556); wife: Margaret (Walsingham), widow of Walter Clarke; she was formerly an attendant on Elizabeth.

Child: Elizabeth Verney, born 2 Sept 1556, at Chislehurst, Kent; married William Palmer, of Parham. [J.W.Fitzwilliam, Parham in Sussex (1947)].

1550s: John Marbury.

Parents: Thomas and Elizabeth Marbury; Elizabeth was in the Queen's Household at Hatfield; she was a Gentlewoman of the Bedchamber from 1559.

The Queen gave a gift at John Marbury's marriage, 1 March 1576; he is described as her godson.
