Acknowledgements.

My first and most heartfelt acknowledgement must be to the late Dr Marie Axton, formerly of Newnham College, Cambridge. For many years she read and discussed my work with me and gave me unfailing encouragement, support, and guidance. I am so sad that she did not live to see this project completed.

When Marie's failing health no longer permitted her to continue, Dr Jean Wilson, also of Cambridge, stepped into her place as a kind and friendly mentor.

I owe more than I can say to Marie and Jean.

I am grateful to Jane A. Lawson and Steven W. May, both of Atlanta, Georgia, specialists on the reign of Elizabeth, for valuable advice and assistance.

I also thank Pauline and Richard Freeman, and Claire Brown, all of Cambridge, for their enthusiastic support.

Two libraries have been essential for my research, and I am much obliged to their staff: the London Library, and Cambridge University Library.

I also make acknowledgement to:

The British Library.
